I happe that semething may yet be done to avoid the resultive of a sale or the inlure to meet the interest pons due in July.

LOVE AND ATTEMPTED SCICIDE.—Last evening, not seven s'clock, a German, named Gottlieb Koch, suppost to destroy his life, on the terrace, man rate as a seminate of the control of the life of the terrace, man rate as with a double barrelied putel. The matter was result of a love affair. The circumstances are so:—About a pear since Koch came over from Germy, in company with a female named Augustanche. They being acquaintances, and he being shert mency, the girl paid his passage to America. After the landing at New York they proceeded to this city, sen they arrived here Koch was taken sick, and was fained to his bed for nine months, during which time out the state of the services of the bound of the services of t Filliard, and remained there three weeks, during which time she paid his beard; after which she gave him notice that she could not pay as board any longer. He then went again to the Falls On Saturday last he came up, and preceeded to Filliard's house, where the girl was stopping, and renewed his request to marry her, which he had many times made before, and received the same answer which she had always given him, viz.; that she was too young to marry, and that they were beth poor. On one occasion before, when she 'save him to understand that she would not marry b'm, be replied that he would hairs his life if she did yot. On Sunday morning he again came to the house, and broke into a back door. A brother of Mr Pilliard y as aroused, and went to the spot and met Hoch, who presented a pistel and investment to fire. A call of 'watch' started him off. He wrote a letter to the girk in which he said, "if you think more of another than you do of me forget man." The otreumbrance above 'station house No. 1. A letter was found on him, safer eased to his parents, speaking of his conditions since he' arrival in tois country; also, in reference to Augusto' having forsaken him, closing with.—"I will end my life. I but you all farewell. This is the last evening I shall live. Farewell, farewell, all of yes. We shall m' yes see each other again." The pistol had evidently been placed in the mouth, but not high enough to enter c the bra n. The right side of the same was more or less mangled. A POLICE JUSTICE IN ALBANY HAVING A SET TO.—We have just learned the particulars of an occurrence at the police court on Tuesday afternoom. It appears that two journeymen tailors, named Hunt and Jones, were brought before Justice Cole, on complaint of an officer, who found them fighting under the influence of liques. Complaint was also made by Hunt against Jones of an attempted assault of a gross character upon the person of his wife, the truth of which charge we have no means of knowing. The men were arraigned before Justice Cole, and Hunt was called upon by him to tell his story. He proceeded to explain where he was, and under what ofroumstances, &c., when he was arrested. He was, however, interrupted by Justice Cole, who hede him stop—"not say another word, as he was drunk." Hunt denied that he was drunk; Justice Cole insisted volumently that he was drunk; Justice Cole insisted volumently that he was must be at down. Hunt became exapperated, and faily told the Justice. Whe lied "He had no sconer said this, when the "Minister of Justice" rose in his seat, and dealt him a blow across the noce with the back of his hand. This was repeated by Justice Cole, who seized Hunt by the collar, and folk, as it is a leged, on his deak for sunstituing with which to inflict punishment. The blood Rewas droin Hunt's noce freely, and he bore the marks of being severely handled. He appeaded to the Justice that he treatment was abusive, and inquired if that was the kind of justice that was dealt out these. He finally took his seat, but laboring under considerable and the seathern was a basive, and inquired if that was the kind of justice that was dealt out these. He finally took his seat, but laboring under considerable and the seathern was a seathern and that the charge that he was drunk was "a d—d lie." Justice Cole then seized him by the collar, and with assistance ejected him from the ocurr room, talling him to return when soher. Jones was retained for
